

Double success in the Apprenticeship Category at the High Sheriff's Awards for Enterprise

On Thursday 23rd March 2017 Dan Berrisford (Managing Director), Suzanne Malone (Finance Director) & Emilia Hoyle (Marketing Assistant) attended the High Sheriff's Awards for Enterprise at Chester Racecourse.

Heat Trace won the Best Company award in the Apprentice category and Emilia won in the Best Apprentice category.

The guest speaker for the evening was John Amaechi, Basketball hero, a psychologist, high-performance coach and New York Times best-selling author.

From left to right: Professor Phil Harris from the Business Research Institute at the University of Chester, David Barlow, Dan Berrisford, Suzanne Malone, Emilia Hoyle, High Sheriff of Cheshire Kathy Cowell OBE DL.

"I am delighted and honoured to win the Best Apprentice award. It gives me great satisfaction receiving this award, it is the reward for my hard work and dedication. Thank you to David Barlow for sponsoring the award! I always strive to produce quality work and I am continually improving and developing as an individual and within my role at Heat Trace. I feel privileged to be within the first cohort of Degree Apprenticeships at Chester University, it is a great opportunity to be completing a Degree whilst working and earning! I am really enjoying my apprenticeship and all my colleagues are very supportive!" Emilia Hoyle, Marketing Assistant – Heat Trace Limited & Chartered Management Degree Apprentice Student – Chester University.

"It's fantastic to win such a prestigious award. It confirms that we're doing the right things and is well deserved recognition for the hard work of the staff that run our apprenticeship scheme and especially for our apprentices who are very much the stars of the show." Dan Berrisford, Heat Trace Limited Managing Director